Hi Alan

How easy is it to put a clicker counter on the web page? Ministers were keen to see how many hits the site was receiving?

Thanks

S.

Pam and Jeremy

Please find attached a first cut response. I am tied up Monday till 1.30pm so it might be a good idea to have someone else look at it. Louise does not work on Monday. I can have a final look at it tomorrow afternoon before the deadline.

Best Regards

Subject: Question for next week

Jake, Can you please request this from CMCD for next week – I'll need it Monday afternoon please.

We will need some work done on a question for next week about open government:

Chief Minister, the ACT Government has begun a new era of open government through a range of new initiatives. Can you please provide an overview of these initiatives?

- Answer: Overview of open government concepts, what are we doing (ie initiatives), and then mention twitter cabinet and how it went (4 minutes - about 4 pages 14pt double space)

Chief Minister can you please provide an overview of what the response was to the twitter cabinet that was held in July?

- Answer: Talk about how people loved it and then what has happened since the twitter cabinet (ie what is our follow up – media release/outcomes – when is the next one?) 2 minutes

Chief Minister, are there any further new initiatives that the government is investing in to expand the concept of open government to broaden the communities access to information.

- Answer: New work? Blog? (I'm not sure what else is occurring)

Subject: Debate at Futuregov

Hi Pam

I just watched Shane Rattenbury take part in a debate at the Futuregov congress, arguing for the affirmative that "Government innovation is best achieved locally". He claimed the Twitter cabinet as one of his examples of good local innovation!

Mick
