* Exempt s43

We do not believe * concerns including over commitment and audit fees were of material reason to vote against Benjamin Brazil

Rem is at median for a company of this size. Concern is around adhoc targets and we are engaging with the company on these issues
Due to director engagement at WH Soul Pattinson and Brickworks, we have decided to support the candidate for now but will continue to monitor closely

Base and STI are fair and in line with market. The LTI looks high due to the amount of equity. However the CEO has shown strong support over time with maintaining his equity. In fact he has taken up rights in the past. So the headline inflation number is high but not unreasonable.

CEO STI EBIT measure at 14% vs Market looking for +30%. Overall REM is not excessive but point above will be monitored

WOW currently demonstrated that they have measures addressing problem gamblers (exceeding those required by law) and that to act further would place them at a competitive disadvantage (operate <5% of total Australian poker machines)

In large part, the board reflects the share register. We don't see evidence of excess benefits and we see appropriate experience on the board. That said, we will be monitoring for fresh round of board members with the appropriate experience and independence.
